

CAPITAL PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF BOYS IN BLUE

ORATORS WHO EULOGIZED THE DEAD HEROES OF THE NATION

and the chorus of praise, little children, taught the lessons of patriotism at the mother's knee, quietly and unobtrusively came and laid their tributes of flowers on the soldiers' graves or at the feet of the statues reared to prove and show to all time the greatness of their sacrifices and their country's gratitude. Thus, among the young and the old, the men and the women, was Memorial Day fittingly and perfectly celebrated.

Foraker Pays Tribute To Heroes of Two Armies

At Arlington Cemetery, where he so many of those who have fought for the Stars and Stripes in many wars, the exercises were especially beautiful and impressive, the stirring address of Senator Foraker alone being enough to move the crowd of thousands to wild ruzzas. Senator Foraker, the principal orator, struck the chord of magnanimity with no uncertain hand, paying tribute of soldier's admiration to the Southrons while he lauded the accomplishments of the Federals and its effect on all subsequent history.

Opens With Salute.

The exercises were opened by the firing of the national salute at noon by the battery of United States Field Artillery, the grim echoes of the explosions echoing dully across the river and reaching to the dome of the Capitol.

Following this an almost endless procession of the Grand Army of the Republic, Spanish War Veterans, Sons of Veterans, Army and Navy Union, Woman's Relief Corps, Ladies of the G. A. R., Legion of Loyal Women, and thousands of men and women, which had formed south of the Arlington mansion, marched, laden with flowers, to the "Tomb of the Unknown," where a committee from the Auxiliary Societies decorated the tomb. During this ceremony the band played a dirge.

Spanish War Soldiers.

Following this the procession marched as far as the Spanish war section, where it separated into small groups to decorate all the graves.

At the amphitheater, after the sounding of the assembly, the Marine Band played "Reveries," which was followed by the whole assembly singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The assembly was then called to order by the department commander, A. P. Tasker. Following this the memorial choir, with George H. Lillebridge as director, rendered the "American Hymn." Bishop Earl Cranston delivered the invocation.

Praised Boys in Blue.

Chaplain Charles C. Pierce also delivered a thrilling address. He praised the work done by the "boys who wore the blue," saying their work had helped to make the world better, both by strengthening this country and spreading abroad the doctrine of liberty and equality. Chaplain Henry S. Stevens pronounced the benediction, and "Taps" was then sounded.

HONOR TO HEROES AT BATTLE GROUND

Ceremonies at Scene of Washington Conflict.

Peculiar significance attached to the sacred and solemn services at Battle Ground Cemetery, in which hundreds of citizens from Brightwood and vicinity took part. Young and old joined in a tribute of praise and thanksgiving to the brave defenders of the Nation's Capital who fell on that historic spot.

The speakers did not fail to call to the minds of their hearers the events of that momentous day in 1864, when Washington was threatened by a foe at her very gates.

"The conflict fought over forty years ago, near where we stand today," said one of the speakers, "together with the death of these brave men whose sacred dust we are here to honor and reverently brought the great American conflict very near to Washingtonians of those days."

Where Capital Was Defended.

Beneath almost the very ground on which they might so gallantly on that memorable day toward the close of the civil strife are buried the soldier dead who stood the brunt of General Early's famous attack on the Capital. A few of the very men who resisted the charge on Fort Stevens that day still live to join in the annual memorial to their less fortunate comrades.

The men who lie buried at Battle Ground fell before the eyes of their beloved President, the Commander-in-Chief of all the armies of the United States, Abraham Lincoln, and hundreds of citizens watched the short conflict on Maryland soil.

Battles Fought Anew.

All these things, and more, were told over again to the loyal ones gathered at the cemetery today. B. H. Warner was in charge of the program. The Soldiers' Home Band, led by Prof. John S. M. Zimmerman, furnished music. After introductory remarks by Comrade Warner, the band played Godard's hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," in which the band, the choir, and the assembly joined.

The Department of the Potomac orders for the observance of Memorial Day were read by Comrade A. S. Taber. The Rev. William Hart Dexter delivered an eloquent invocation, "Beyond Gates of Paradise," sung by G. F. Randolph, Jr., seemed to carry with it a special message on such an occasion. An address by the Rev. George Bailey was heartily applauded.

Simon Wolf was the orator of the day. He was accorded a warm reception. Among the musical features of the program which were admirably rendered were a baritone solo, Schubert's "Serenade," by Musician Sugge, of the band; Schumann's "The Voice of Love," by the Soldiers' Home Band, and a bass solo, "The Last Parade," by Prof. Arthur W. Porter.

Farewell Volleys.

At the close of the service three volleys, the soldier's farewell, were fired by a firing squad from the boys' brigade, Lieut. H. A. Moores commanding. Then began the decoration of the graves.

Assisted by a detachment from the Boys' Brigade spread flowers in beautiful array upon the graves from which flew little American flags. Lieut. V. H. Blen commanded the detachment of the Boys' Brigade assigned to this duty.

When the last loving tribute was paid the bugler of the Soldiers' Home Band, who opened the services by blowing the assembly, dismissed the assembly by sounding "Taps."

OBSERVATIONS.

It is hard to say which is the more difficult—living down a past or living up to a future. Experience—the name we give our failures. Impulse—what we regret next day.—Smart Set.
